

Hats off to the people who make our gardens look so beautiful

This is what George Cooper, Sharon and Keith MacMillan were doing on Tuesday, September 27, 2009.

They are dedicated to planting and maintaining the flower gardens around St. Paul's. Their attentiveness assures that the grounds surrounding the Church buildings are colourful and well maintained at all times.

When this picture was snapped the trio were cutting back some of the beautiful plants, whose growing season was just passing. They were beautiful all spring, summer and early fall and this attention will assure that they will be again next summer.

This particular location is directly in front of the church, near the illuminated sign. In the background is a maple tree in full fall colour, about to drop its leaves so that the team of "MacMillan and Wife and George C" will be able to rake them up for disposal.

The people of St. Paul's
We salute them for their devotion.
